SECTION II - K1-12 PRINCIPAL

Good Evening,

There has been a lot going on in the school since the last meeting. While it has been busy, it has been a good busy with a lot of positive things going on. Students and staff continue to bring energy and enthusiasm to the building.

Through February, we've celebrated tournament season for both basketball and wrestling with dress up days and an assembly. Valentine's day landed perfectly on a Wednesday before a break. This week is FFA week, on Monday we held a school wide assembly. Today, FFA leaders from the high school spent time visiting with the elementary students with the purpose of educating about FFA. The 100th day of school is the 29th of February and Dr. Seuss Day is the 7th of March.

The school science fair will be February 27. This was an optional participation for high school students. For junior high, students elected to either participate with an individual science fair project or work in groups of two to present to the judges a project framed by the scientific method. Only those who chose to participate with an individual project will be eligible to move on to the regional fair. The regional fair will be held on the 7th of March. The state fair is being held on the 4th of April.

A major thank you goes to our two exceptional MTDA facilitators. These individuals jumped right in and have worked well together in ensuring our students are successful in this new style of learning. This wouldn't be a success without them and all their efforts. I'm confident in saying that the switch to MTDA has been a success. Our students have taken on the challenge of online/hybrid learning with a positive attitude. We've certainly faced challenges and hiccups, however between MTDA, our facilitators, Schoolhouse IT, and most importantly our students, are making the most of the situation. Overall, student achievement is comparable to having a teacher providing instruction. The communication between MTDA, students, families and us has been the key to the success. I'm pleased with the level of instruction, content knowledge, support, and willingness to be flexible that the MTDA teachers have provided. So far, the partnership has been very successful.

Finally a short but needed break from testing. The fourth of five MAST testing windows opens mid March and closes in early April. The short break will be enjoyed.

An update on the new reading curriculum in the elementary school. Elementary teachers have narrowed down the curriculum to the one they have the most interest in. We started the process in October with four different curriculum vendors, Wonders, Into Reading, Savvas, and Benchmark. Each vendor provided samples of printed and digital materials. Each teacher vetted their own grade level and completed an in depth scoring rubric. From there, we collected the scores and compiled the data into an average overall score. Benchmark from Benchmark Education scored higher than the others. We are proceeding with a presentation from this company which will be this Friday during PIR. Afterward, I would like to set a time for community members to take a look at the materials and offer input. From there, we will make our recommendations to the board.

As the year has continued, I've had time to learn and observe the needs of our school. I and other members of the staff have found a need for character education. While all the facets of character education and development are too great for this report, I'll pass out information that will provide a quick insight into what character education is and how it can be implemented into Cascade Public Schools.

Character education consists of 11 principles. These 11 principles serve as a guide and means to assess the implementation of character education in schools. Currently, we have a committee of 12 individuals from elementary, junior high, high school, and athletics working on principle one which is selecting, defining, and embedding a set of core values that will serve as the foundation for building a culture of character. In this process, we've also included students from high school, junior high, and upper elementary to gather their input and see the direction that they would like our school to go. Our next step is to get these words, our defined core values, into the community for feedback and input. I also plan to present our selected and defined values to the board this March. This process will take time and a great deal of buy-in from all stakeholders from our students to the community. While the process is lengthy and takes a lot of hard work and consistency, I've been a part of school communities that have invested and dedicated themselves to the process and have seen the great benefit of implementing character education.

Finally, we have had interest from two candidates for the 5th grade position and one candidate for the open science position. We will likely be starting the vetting process towards the end of the week and into early next week.

Until next time,

Michael Wilson K-12 Principal

CEP The Character Education Partnership

ELEVEN PRINCIPLES of Effective Character Education

By Tom Lickona Eric Schaps Catherine Lewis

There is no script for effective character education, but there are some important basic principles. The following eleven principles serve as criteria that schools and other groups can use to plan a character education effort and to evaluate available character education programs, books, and curriculum resources.

1. Character education promotes core ethical values as the basis of good character. Character education holds, as a starting philosophical principle, that there are widely shared, pivotally important core values - such as caring, honesty, fairness. responsibility and respect for self and other – that form the basis of good character. A school committed to character education explicitly names and publicly stand for the values; propagates them to all members of the school community; defines them in terms of behaviors that can be observed in the life of the school; models lese values; studies and discusses them; uses them as the basis of human relations in the school; celebrates their manifestations in the school and community and upholds them by making an school member accountable to standard of conduct consistent with the core values.

In a school committed to developing character, these core values are treated as a matter of obligation, as having a claim on the conscience of the individual and community. Character education asserts that the validity of these values, and our obligation to uphold them derive from the fact that such values affirm our human dignity; they promote the development and welfare of the individual person; they serve the common good; they meet the classical ethical tests of reversibility (Would you want to be treated this way?) and universalizability (Would you want all persons to act this way in a similar situation?); and they define our rights and responsibilities in a democratic society. The school makes clear that these basic human values transcend religious and cultural differences and express our common humanity.

2. "Character" must be comprehensively defined to include thinking, feeling, and behavior. In an effective character education program character is broadly conceived to encompass the cognitive, emotional and behavioral aspects of the moral life life. Good character consists of understanding, caring about, and acting upon core ethical values. The task of character education therefore is to help student and all other members of the learning community know "the good," values it, and act upon it. As people grow in their character, they will develop an increasingly refined understating of the core values, and a stronger tendency to behave in accordance with those values..

- 3. Effective character education requires an intentional proactive, and comprehensive approach that promotes the core values in all phases of school life.
- The schools committed to character education look at themselves through a moral lens and see how virtually everything that goes on in school affects the values and character of students. An intentional and proactive approach plans deliberate ways to develop character, rather than simply waiting for opportunities to occur. A comprehensive approach uses all aspects of schooling -- the teacher's example, the discipline policy, the academic curriculum (including the drug, alcohol, and sex education curriculum), the instructional process, the assessment of leaning, the management of the school environment, relationships with parents. and so on -- as opportunities for character development. "Stand alone" character education programs can be useful first steps for helped elements of an ongoing effort but must not be considered a substitute for a holistic approach that integrates character development into every aspect of school life.
- 4. The school must be a caring community. The school itself must embody good character. It must progress toward becoming a microcosm of the civil, caring, and just society we seek to create as a nation. The school can do this by becoming a moral community that helps students form caring attachments to adults and to each other. These caring relationships will foster both the desire to learn and the desire to be a good person. All children and adolescents have a need to belong, and they are more likely to internalize the values and expectations of groups that meet this need. The daily life of classrooms, as well as all other parts of the school environment (e.g., the corridors, cafeteria. playground, and school bus), must be imbued with core values such as concern and respect for others, responsibility, kinless, and fairness.
- 5. To develop character, students need opportunities for moral action. In the ethical as in the intellectual domain, students are constructive learners; they lead best by doing. To develop good character, they need many and varied opportunities to apply values such as responsibility and fairness in everyday interactions and discussions. By grappling with real-life challenges how to divide the labor in a cooperative learning group, how to reach consensus in a class meeting, how to carry out a service leaning project how to reduce fights on the playground students develop practical understanding of the requirements of fairness, cooperation, and respect. Through repeated moral experience, students can also develop and practice the moral skills and behavioral habits that make up the action side of character.
- 6. Effective character education includes a meaningful and challenging academic curriculum that respects all learners and helps them succeed. Character education and academic learning must not be conceived as separate spheres; rather there must be a strong mutually supportive relationship. In a caring classroom and school where students feel liked and respected by their teachers and fellow students, students are more likely to work hard and achieve. Reciprocally, when students are enabled to succeed at the work of school, they are more likely to feel valued and cared about as persons.

Because students come to school with diverse skills, interest and needs a Curriculum that helps all students succeed will be one whose content and pedagogy are sophisticated enough to engage all learners. That means moving beyond a skill-and-drill, paper-and-pencil curriculum to one that is inherently interesting and meaningful for students. A character education school makes effective use of active teaching and learning methods such as cooperative learning, problem-solving approaches, experience-based projects, and the like. One of the most authentic ways to respect children is to respect the way they learn.

- 7. character education should strive to develop students' intrinsic motivation. As students develop good character, they develop a stronger inner commitment to doing what their moral judgment tells them is right. Schools especially in their approach to discipline should strive to develop this intrinsic commitment to core values. They should minimize reliance on extrinsic rewards and punishments that distract students' attention from the real reasons to behave responsibly: the rights and needs of self and other. Responses to rule-breaking should give students opportunities for restitution and foster the students' understanding of the rules and willingness to abide by them in the future. Similarly within the academic curriculum, intrinsic motivation should be fostered in every way possible. This can be done by helping students experience the challenge and interest of subject matter, the desire to work collaboratively with other students, and the fulfillment of making a positive difference in another person's life or in their school or community.
- 8. The school staff must become a learning and moral community in which all share responsibility for character education and attempt to adhere to the same core values that guide the education of students. Three things need attention here. First, all school staff -- teachers, administrator, counselors, coaches, secretaries, cafeteria workers, playground aides, bus drivers -- must be involved in learning about, discussing, and taking ownership of the character education effort. All of these adults must model the core values in their own behavior and take advantage of other opportunities they have to influence the character of the students with whom they come into contact. Second, the same values and norms that govern the life of students must govern the collective life of the adult members of the school community. If students are to be treated as constructive learners, so must adults. They must have extended staff development and many opportunities to observe and then try out ways of integrating character education practices into their work with students. If students are given opportunities to work collaboratively and participate in decision-making that improves classrooms and school, so must adults. If a school's staff members do not experience mutual respect, fairness, and cooperation in their adult relationships, they are less likely to be committed to teaching those values to students.

Third, the school must find and protect time for staff reflection on moral matters. School staff, through faculty meetings and smaller support groups, should be regularly asking: What positive, character-building experiences is the school already providing for its students? What negative moral experiences (e.g., peer cruelty, student cheating, adult disrespect of students, littering of the grounds) is the school currently failing to address? And what important moral experiences (e.g., cooperative learning, school and community service, opportunities to learn about and interact with people from different racial, ethnic, and socioeconomic backgrounds) is the school now omitting? What school practices are at odds with its professed core values and desire to develop a caring school community? Reflection of this nature is an indispensable condition for developing the moral life of a school.

- 9. Character education requires moral leadership from both staff and students.
- For character education to meet the criteria outlined thus far, there must be leaders (a principal, another administrator, a lead teacher) who champions the effort and, at least initially, a character education committee (or several such support groups, each focused on a particular aspect of the character effort) with responsibility for long-range planning and program implementation. Over time, the functions of this committee may be taken on by the school's regular governing bodies. Students should also be brought into roles of moral leadership through student government, peer conflict mediation programs, crossage tutoring, and the like.
- 10. The school must recruit parents and community members as full partners in the school's character building efforts. A schools' character education mission statement should state explicitly what is true: Parents are the first and most important moral educators of their children. Next, the school should take pains at every stage to communicate with parents about the school's goals and activities regarding character development -- and how families can help build trust between home and school, parents should be represented on the character leadership committee that does the planning the school should actively reach out to "disconnected" subgroups of parents, and all parents need to be informed about and have a chance to react and consent to -- the school's proposed Core values and how the school proposes to try to teach them. Finally, schools and families will enhance the effectiveness of their partnership if they recruit the help of the wider community -- businesses, religious institutions, youth organizations, the government, and the media -- in promoting the core ethical values.
- 11 Evaluation of character education' should assess the character of the school, the school staff's functioning as character educators, and the extent to which students manifest good character. Effective character education must include an effort to assess progress. Three broad kinds of outcomes merit attention:
- a) The character of the school: To what extent is the school becoming a more caring community? This can be assessed, for example, with surveys that ask students to indicate the extent to which they agree with statements such as, "Students in this school (classroom) respect and care about each other," and "This school (classroom) is like a family."
- (b) The school staff's growth as character educators: To what extend have adult staff -- teaching faculty, administrators, and support personnel developed understanding of what they can do to foster character development? Personal commitment to doing so? Skills to carry it out? Consistent habit of acting upon their commitment?

(c) Student character: To what event do students manifest understanding of commitment to, and action upon the core values? Has student attendance gone up? Has referrals gone down? Vandalism declined?

Schools can also evaluate the three results of character (doing, feeling, and behaving) through anonymous questionnaires that measure student moral judgment (for example) cheating on tests, would you cheat if you were sure you wouldn't get caught? How many times have you cheated on a test?

Such questionnaires can be administered at the beginning of a school's character initiative to get a baseline and again at later points to assess progress.

Superintendent's Message to the Board,

The school safety and threat committee has been meeting to assess district disaster risks and review/update our school safety plans and protocols. We will be meeting once a week for ~15 min to assess our current protocols and procedures, prioritize updates, and modify plans, policies and procedures accordingly. This falls in line with Senate Bill 213 and the task requested by board members. We have found some good material to help us revise/improve our safety protocols. It should make us more consistent across our school.

I have received several positive phone calls regarding our new MTDA courses for science. Initial skepticism about the courses seems to have faded. I think the roll-out of the new initiative was successful. While I would still prefer a well-qualified teacher in the classroom, the course work and support received has exceeded my expectations and I feel this is a good option for our kids if we are unsuccessful in finding qualified teachers in the future. The science position has caused us a lot of heartburn over time and hopefully this will be a viable option if needed again in the future. We also found out that one of the MTDA instructors we have for our students was awarded Montana Teacher of the Year last year.

I sent out a survey during the month called the Comprehensive Needs Assessment to all stakeholders of the district. This survey was from the Office of Public Instruction and the purpose of the survey was to collect stakeholder feedback on various aspects of district management. The state would like me to collect the data from the survey and use it to identify areas of strength and weakness and to create a district improvement plan to address weaknesses as well as use the data to create a profile of a graduate. This will be tied to our accreditation and will be part of some of our state reports. I will share the results of the survey when I receive them.

I am also currently working to create our Early-Literacy program. This is the program that will need to replace our current Early Kindergarten. The state will no longer fund Early Kindergarten but they have replaced it with an opportunity to create a similar program that has similar goals. This program will need to have an admittance evaluation through some type of screener exam. I am not sure exactly what it will look like currently but I have some additional information if you would like a more detailed explanation of the program.

STUDENTS 3310P

Academic Honesty and Responsible Use of Resources

The Board of Trustees believes that academic honesty and personal integrity are fundamental components of a student's education and character development. The Board expects that students will not engage in acts of academic dishonesty.

Academic dishonesty is defined as a breach of standards of academic integrity may include but is not limited to plagiarism, collusion, falsifying academic records, and any other act designed to give unfair academic advantage to the student. Such a breach of standards may also include any attempt to deceive or mislead a teacher in arriving at an honest evaluation of learning. This includes aiding other students in acts of academic dishonesty and using programmable calculations, artificial intelligence or other technology in a manner not specified or authorized by the teacher. The act of knowingly and intentionally presenting materials, work, or concepts taken from sources of another person, publication, or program as one's own work product without appropriate documentation, teacher authorization, or citation is also considered to be academic dishonesty.

Students, parents/guardians, staff, and administrators shall be responsible for creating and maintaining a positive school climate that encourages honesty. It is the intent of the Board and the District that academic dishonesty be dealt with consistently and effectively in a manner aimed at addressing the specific incident, as well as changing the student's future behavior.

Engaging in any type of academic dishonesty will result in consequences consistent with District Policy 3300, 3310, and the Student Handbook.

This policy does not prohibit use of technology, artificial intelligence, sources, or techniques authorized by the classroom teacher as part of training or educational coursework in responsible and appropriate manner consistent the curriculum or lesson plan. Violation of classroom teacher directive or exceeding the scope of the classroom teacher's permission to utilize technology, sources, or techniques may be considered a violation of the policy. Teachers are encouraged to incorporate responsible use of technology into coursework consistent with the District's acceptable use protocols at Policy 3540 and explain appropriate use for specific assignments in a consistent manner.
